

The Daily Smurf

From Roving Smurf Reporter Adam Simpson

Wake up was a crisp 5.30am, with Papa Smurf obviously still a little sleepy, walking in on a stunning young Smurf in the shower! Wide awake now Papa Smurf lead the Smurflings onto the bus as we said goodbye to Masterton. Next stop Waipukurau, this trip was made memorable by a Morgan Freeman flick that tugged at the heart strings of many. Waipukurau brought great success for the young Smurflings as we claimed our first victory over the dirty Concords and Indians. Savouring our win as well as a delicious lunch we clambered back on the bus for another 3 hour to trip. We arrived at 'Flash Packers', then were quickly shipped off for a welcomed dip and a chance to sus out our next competition pool. The Smurflings were treated to a perfectly stuffed, rolled and cooked possum for dinner. Full up and tuckered out the Smurflings went back to 'Flash Packer' to get a good night sleep so they will be ready to tackle the Concords and Indians in the pool.

GO SMURFS Go!

The world has seen many horrific battles but none so bloody, vicious and as the Battle of the Tuki Tuki River yesterday. The river ran red with the blood of the Indians the air was thick with the stink of burning carcasses from crashed concords. The field belonged to the victors and the smiling faces of the Smurf army were a joy to behold. If you can imagine the final battle scene of Lord of the rings with liberal doses of flour, eggs and stinky mud then you are only half way to the horror of the battle of Tuki Tuki.

The medals and decorations are

The "taking one for the team award" to coach Leann who even endured the Indians secret weapon of the canine fecal facial fatality.

The John "you cannot be serious" MaCenroe Award for lack of physical contact Mitchell

The big softie award for crying during Bucketlist Coach Andrew

The coaches have been hard at work on the entries for our meets today and are looking forward to raising our average points per swim tomorrow.
